The Story of the Ruby

The ruby has always been appreciated for its exotic red hues, ranging from purplish red to orangey red. Thanks to its exceptional quality of keeping beauty unaltered in time, like true love this gem is considered everlasting and remains one of the most expensive and desired gemstones. Considered “The King of Gems”, the ruby has always been enveloped in a legendary aura, and even today, it is believed to possess magic powers including the extraordinary ability of giving peace.

According to an ancient Egyptian legend, wearing a ruby near the skin promoted a long, healthy and happy life. Moreover, the ruby was once thought to shine through clothing, to nurture life, to generate energy and even to make water boil.

It was also believed to banish evil thoughts and reconcile disputes. Women in ancient times used it to promote fertility, and Burmese warriors inserted genuine rubies beneath their skin to protect them from being wounded in battle. Some cultures, acknowledging these exclusive powers, reserved the privilege of wearing rubies exclusively for kings.

In 1996, Roberto Coin began marking the “Appassionata” collection by setting a small ruby hidden within each piece so that the stone was directly in contact with the skin.

Since then this tradition has been carried through to all other Roberto Coin collections so that it has become the exclusive mark of each jewel by Roberto Coin. This dedication is a secret gift of good wishes to every woman who is both lucky and delighted to wear and love one of his exclusive creations.
